We sat down to put together the jagged edges long enough to me to question my ability to memorize the geography of the middle school. With every new piece that my daughter asked, "Which world is this, mother? And what about this yellow, what the world is this?" "I could not help but think about the rigidity Almost formulated to that question. Frankly, our world is divided, especially now, in many different worlds. It doesn't seem to agree on anything. And although we all live in the same pandemic, no two experiences are the same. No two states are the same. Two cities are not the same. There are no two houses are the same. And yet, I saw while wondering the different shapes and sizes of each state. "How this world likes it? What do you have? days to come. I started seeing the eyes enlarged as we approached the completion of the puzzles. "are all connected! We did it! "and while he stared at the completed puzzle and the proud smile on his face, I couldn't help but I couldn't think about how those differences were what he did this puzzle. The exclusive state lines that divide them, connect also The states together. Different colors and soils that make every state to make this country the beautiful collective land that is; a land that we marvel and we want to explore more. The different people who live this world - individuals who together have the Power to celebrate the differences, show kindness, be adventurous and make this world a really nice place. This post comes from today's community of the parenting team, in which all members are invited to publish and discuss parental solutions. To learn more And join us! Because we are all in this whole. The island of Guam is about 30 miles long (48.2 kilometers) for a long time and perhaps only 12 miles (19.3 kilometers) crosses RSO its broadest point. A tiny island of this kind, certainly, is easy to lose sight of the Pacific, about 3,800 miles (6.15 kilometers) west of Honolulu. Who knows what's going on there? Yet something nobody should be confused about the worries of Guam's concerns. Because of its designation as U.S. territory. And his position on the other side of the international line of the line, Guam boasts his semi-official slogan, "where America's Day begins". Thousands of U.S. troops. They are room there. Its about 160,000 residents are US citizens. Michael San Nicolas represents the island of Congress.Guam may not be America that many think when I consider old glory, baseball and consumerism not accepted. But it's not wrong: Guam is American. It may be appropriate to recognize those on Guam, and the other territories of u.s.s. Permanently in the Pacific and in the Caribbean, as full-in Americans.Rather Three, for example, foreigners. Or some breaking groups that mother's nation must continue to control. Relative that, you know, the way in which England has treated its American colonies a couple of centuries ago. "America has a problem of colonies," says lawyer Neil Weate, the president e Of equally American, a group of pro-territory rights. "A few years ago, I wouldn't have used the colonies to describe the report [between the United States and its territories]. But I think in the last year, with the attention on racial justice ... The word Cologne now, I think that People do not beat an eye. It only describes the relationship now more than ever. "An American Primeramerican territory has a long long With the territories. The north-western territory, the southwestern territory, the territory of Oregon, the territory of Oregon, the territory of Indiana, Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana ..., practically every state now in the Union has begun its American adventure as At least part of a territory or two, apart from the nomenclature. Even before the Declaration of Independence, what were the original "colonies" if not "territories" of England? As the United States kneel its way through North America in the pursuit of his manifest destiny, every ancient territory was modeled in a state or a few of them. In 1959, Alaska and Hawaii both went from the territories to the stars on the flag. And the stopped. More than 60 years later, the United States still have five permanently populated territories sitting in various states of American-Ness, nobody on a fast-trip runway. A beautiful look: American Samoa: acquired in a Treaty of 1899 with Germany, American Samoa is considered a territory that is not incorporated (which means that only parts of the US establishment) and not organized (which means that The Congress did not issue a set of laws, such as a bill of rights, particularly for that territory). It differs from the other territories in this list in an important way: people born in American Samoa are considered U.S. Citizens, not es. Citizens. Generally, all citizens are citizens, but citizens are not citizens. The citizens "Dove Allegiance" to the United States and can be granted a passport U.S., but do not share many advantages of citizens. Strangely, and constitutionally questionable, US citizens in the 50 States and DC have more rights than US citizens from some of the territories below ... an important bone of contention for people on this list. The North Mariana islands: once part of the Pacific Pacific Territory of the Pacific Nations (TTPN), North Marianas (Guam is the southernmost island of the archipelago) is now considered a "Commonwealth in the political union With and under the ruler "of the United States about 90 percent of the population (about 51,000 total) lives on the island of Saipan. Commonwealths "Northern Marianas and Puerto Rico "are generally considered a "more developed relationship" with the United States compared to other territories. The people of the Marianas is citizens u.s.s. Citizens for Bianco or Descento.Puerto Rico: Spain ceded control of the island of Puerto Rico at the US. In 1899. The population is far from that of the other territories; It is about 3.1 million. 2.4 million this is in San Juan. Puerto Rico is considered an organized territory incorporated from the.s., With the state of the Commonwealth. The citizens of Puerto Rico are the citizens of the United States for birth or descent.u.s. Virgin Islands: Purchased for $ 25 million in 1917 from Denmark, the Virgin Islands U.S. Incorporated territory of the U.S. population are considered. The population, estimated at 105,000, is about 76% black. Its economy is up, among other industries, tourism, clock and rum distillation. His people are citizens in the United States per birth or descent. They took from Spain from the United States in 1898 during the Spanish-American war, Guam was captured by the Japanese for three years in the Second World War. U.s. The island released in 1944. It has been considered a built-in organized territory of the United States since 1950. The military bases of the United States are critical in the Pacific Theater. People born on Guam, and their descendants are US citizens. The struggle for equality is that the current territories of the US state could be better described as separate and uneven. The territories pay billions of dollars in federal taxes (though, generally, not Personal income fees. About 20,000 people of the territories serve in the U.S. Army. American Samoa has more enrolled military, per capita, of any state in the Union. But if the people who live there are citizens (as they are in every territory but American Samoa) or citizens (as they are in American Samoa), you do to vote for the President of the United States. They are represented in the House of representatives, but with a non-vote representative. There are no territorial representatives in the United States Senate. "Over 3.5 million Americans are denied the
